Numb. 556.

THE Pennſylvania GAZETTE.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

FROM AUGUST 2. TO AUGUST 9. 1739.

LONDON, April 17.

THEY write from Madrid, that M. Vander Meer, Ambaſſador from the States-General, already knows the Contents of the King of Spain's Reply to the laſt Anſwer of their High Mightineſſes, which, it ſeems, is a Piece much labour'd, very prolix, and better calculated to encreaſe the Miſunderſtanding between the two Nations, than to put an End to it. A Sum of Money, amounting to ſix Millions of Crowns, is borrowing at Madrid, which, it's generally believ'd, is deſign'd to make the Acquiſition of the Dutchies of Parma and Placentia, and to procure the Iſland of Corſica as an Eſtabliſhment for Don Philip.

Letters from Conſtantinople ſay, that according to the Plan of the Operations agreed upon for the enſuing Campaign, the Grand Vizir, accompanied by Mahoment's Standards will march directy to Temeſware with the Grand Army, which will be very formidable; and at the ſame Time the Seraſkier who retook Orſova, will undertake the Siege of Belgrade: When both theſe Places ſhall be reduced, the Turks will unite their Forces in order to make themſelves Maſters of Tranſylvania. This Plan of Operations is confirm'd by Letters from the Marquis de Villeneuve, and by thoſe of other foreign Miniſters at Conſtantinople.

An Extract of a private Letter from Peterſburg.

The Marquis de Botta having receiv'd Diſpatches ſent from Vienna, went immediately afterwards to Count d' Oſterman, to whom he declar'd, that the Emperor had conceiv'd ſtrong Hopes, that the Succours with which he was to be ſupplied by Ruſſia would conſiſt in Troops according to its Engagement, and not in Money: That if even her Czariſh Majeſty, in the Room of 2,000,000 of Rubles, was to give double that Sum, ſuch a Supply would not be near ſo efficacious as Troops for ſupporting a War which his Imperial Majeſty had principally undertaken at the Requeſt of Ruſſia; wherefore the Emperor earneſtly deſir'd her Czariſh Majeſty, if it was yet poſſible, to ſend him a Supply in Troops, becauſe if that could not be done, his Imperial Majeſty would think himſelf obliged to put an End, in the beſt Manner he could, to a War which to him was ſo burthenſome.

April 23. The laſt Letters from Baſtia adviſe, that the Marquis de Maillebois was ſtill at Calvi, and ſeem'd, by the Diſpoſitions he was making, determin'd to take Montemaggiore before he went to Baſtia, having order'd the Grenadiers of the Regiment of Cambreſis, and 50 choſen Men, to march from San Fiorenza; and cauſed 600 Olive Trees, which render'd the Approach to Montemaggiore ſomewhat difficult, to be cut down. This laſt Action has ſo irritated the Rebels, that after having been extreamly troubleſome, whilſt this was performing, they burnt 5 or 6 Houſes belonging to ſome who had ſubmitted themſelves to the Genoeſe; to whom a ſuitable Reparation has been promis'd, at the Expence of thoſe who did this raſh Action. Theſe Letters add, that the Rebels, to the Number of 10,000, well arm'd, and reſolv'd to defend the Liberty of their Country, are aſſembled near Balagna, which, if true, may render the taking of Montemaggiore exceedingly difficult. In ſhort, this Iſland ſeems to be threaten'd with approaching Ruin.

MADRID, April 28. The Marqueſs de Villarias, Secretary of State, has loudly complain'd to Mr. Keene, the Britiſh Miniſter, of the South Sea Company's Refuſal to pay the 68,000 l. Sterling due to the King; and added, that his Majeſty would never deſiſt from that Pretenſion; that that Article muſt abſolutely be ſettled before the Conferences are open'd between the Commiſſaries of the two Crowns, for which Purpoſe the following Method might be taken; which is, that the King ſhould deduct that Sum out of the 95,000 l. which he has granted for indemnifying the Engliſh Merchants; that if that Condition is accepted, the Conferences may not only be opened without any further Delay, but that his Majeſty will cauſe to be paid forthwith the 27,000 l. remaining after that Deduction made; and as to the other Pretenſions, as well of the South Sea Company as the Engliſh Merchants, they ſhould be diſcuſs'd with all the Exactneſs poſſible in the Conferences to be held by the Commiſſaries of both Nations. To all which Mr. Keene anſwered, that his Inſtructions extended no farther than a certain Point, and did not permit him to accept that Propoſal without acquainting his Court with it; that all he could do was to ſend away a Courier to London for further Inſtructions. Accordingly his Excellency diſpatched a Courier there this Morning, and the Marqueſs de Villarias ſent away another at the ſame time to Don Thomas Geraldino; and there is no Appearance that the Conferences will be open'd before the Return of theſe Couriers.

LONDON, May 1. They write from Conſtantinople, That during the Abode of the Kan of Tartary in this City, he inſiſted ſtrongly on the Neceſſity there is for the Ottoman Port to conclude a Peace with the Chriſtian Powers, eſpecially with that of Ruſſia, to engage whoſe conſent it will be worth while to yield up Aſoph, provided ſhe will agree to demoliſh the Out-Works of that City. To give the greater Weight to his Reaſon, he

he repreſented to the Divan, that the Crimea was Condition to ſupport themſelves under another In from the Muſcovites; and that if it was reſolv'd t tinue the War, and preſerve that Peninſula, th muſt take the whole Burthen of defending it upo ſelf.

VIENNA, May 5. The Recruits which ha ſent from different Parts of the Empire, amou 40,000 Men; ſo that with the Troops of Saxony and Bavaria, an Army of 80,000 effective Men, will pretty early take the Field, not reckoning the Militia Magazines that are provided for this Army, and Money to ſupport it, ſo that there is room to hope for a happy Campaign.

May 9. The Rumours about a Peace revive again; and we talk of ſome Preliminaries propoſed by the Court of France, which may probably be accepted by the Grand Signior. It is certain, however, that the new Grand Vizir continues filing off a great Number of Troops towards Moldavia, in order to reinforce the two Camps, which the Turks are forming between Bender and Choczim.

May 13. Advices from Hungary bring, that Count Wallis having viſited the Magazine of Corn, and another of Powder, had found, that in the former, there was ſcarcely a third Part of the Corn mention'd in the Commiſſary's Specification; and that in the latter, two thirds of the Powder was damaged. Which Advices add, that the Count, to prevent the like Miſdemeanors, had caus'd two of the Commiſſaries, who had the Direction of theſe Magazines, to be hang'd.

LONDON, May 14. On Saturday laſt the Right Honourable the Houſe of Lords addreſs'd his Majeſty at St. James's, on his laying before them the Treaty concluded with the King of Denmark; when his Majeſty was pleaſed to return an Anſwer to the following Purpoſe: That he took this Addreſs as a real Mark of their Zeal and Affection for his Perſon and Government, and might depend upon it, that the Confidence they repoſe in him ſhould be made uſe of with the ſtricteſt Regard to the true Intereſt of his People.

Yeſterday a great Cauſe was tried before the Court of King's Bench, where his Majeſty and the Parliament of England were Plaintiffs, and Richard Whitefield, Eſq; as Heir at Law to the late Richard Norton, Eſq; of Southwick in the County of South-Hampton, Defendant: It was tried on two Iſſues; firſt, whether the Will of the ſaid Richard Norton, Eſq; was duly executed; and whether he was in his right Senſes when the ſaid Will was made. After a Hearing which laſted from Nine o'Clock on Saturday Morning till Four the next Morning, the Jury, being a ſpecial one of Gentlemen of the County of Hants, brought in for the Defendant, being of Opinion, Mr. Norton was a Lunatick at the making of his Will.

There are eleven Men in Town who lately came out of Weſtmoreland, to give Evidence in a Cauſe that was depending to prove the Cuſtom of a Manor; their Ages put together make 1010 Years, and they all live within two or three Miles of each other.

May 17. By a private Letter from Vienna we are inform'd, that General Wallis, upon his Arrival at Belgrade, after having ſeen the Situation of a Part of the Imperial Army, ſaid to one of his Friends, I hope to avoid the Fate of the Count Seckendorff and Konigſegg; but if Affairs do not take a happier Turn than they promiſe, the Favour I would aſk of Heaven, is, to have the Fate of Count Merci.

May 19. The laſt private Letters from the North adviſe, that the King of Sweden had loſt the Uſe of one Side with the dead Palſey.

The Philipina, Davis, from Gibraltar, is arriv'd at Falmouth; who, 'tis ſaid, hath on Board the Corpſe of the Duke of Ormond, who died ſome Days ſince at Avignon. His Friends will truſt his Corpſe now he is dead, where he would not truſt it himſelf when he was alive.

On Saturday Morning the Cirenceſter Coach was robb'd by two Highwaymen on Hounſlow-Heath; they were ſo audacious as to defy the Guard, who was behind the Coach, arm'd with a Blunderbuſs, telling him if he ſhot one of them, the other would be the Death of him; on which the Fellow, with great Prudence, ſuffer'd them to rob the Paſſengers of about Eight Pounds.

SARUM, April 30. We hear from Limington in Hants, that one Mrs. Mitchel was lately brought to Bed there of a Daughter, whoſe Great, Great Grand Mother is ſtill living, and has already ſeen her Fifth Generation, and all Daughters; ſo that ſhe may ſay the ſame that the Diſtich doth, made on one of the Dalburg's Family of Baſil.

1 2 3 4
Mater ait Natæ, die Natæ, Filia Natam
5 6
Ut moneat, Natæ, plangere Filiolam.

Riſe up Daughter, and go to thy Daughter,
4 5 6
For her Daughter's Daughter hath a Daughter.

She is about 92 Years of Age, is in perfect Health, has all her Senſes clear, and hopes to ſee five Generations more.

To the MEMORY of JOHN DOMMETT, the unborn Poet, lately deceaſed.

THE Fate of Dommett is not ſingly hard;
The ſame's the Lot of many a rhyming Bard:
No Praiſe while yet they live on Earth to hear,
But when they're dead, Folks tell their Thoughts ſincere.
Poor Dommett's gone; his Loſs the Criticks moan;
And all confeſs his Wit was all his own,
His Learning too, his Metre, and his All;
And that he was a meer Original:
An honeſt Writer, not a Plagiary;
His Style and Senſe were never known to vary.
He was good natur'd, for when Dulneſs preſt
To be admitted, 'twas a welcome Gueſt;
And ſhould a tuneleſs Rhyme accoſt his Ear,
He'd ſay, my Friend here's Room enough, ſit here.
Oft' would low Nonſenſe on his Pen impoſe;
But he would ſeldom one kind Offer loſe:
So much Civility, ſo little Pride,
Had never Poet, elſe he would them hide.
O! John, where now ſhall we thy Fellow find?
He is not born, or is not left behind.
'Tis true there are who emulate thy Parts,
And fall but little ſhort of thy Deſerts:
Some in the Town, ſome in the Counties live;
And New-Ceſaria can good Samples give.
But their bright ſhining, Franklin does eclipſe,
By hording up their num'rous Manuſcripts;
To their great Loſs who take down-working Pills,
Kite-Makers, Paſtry-Cooks and Paper-Mills.
Still ſhort of thy Humility they fall,
And of thy great Benevolence to All;
For thou wouldſt write a Poem for a Dram,
And offer it to thoſe who would it damn.
While ſuch as ſeem to imitate thee, ſtrive
How by their high-pric'd Rhymes themſelves may thrive.
Let none now dare demand Acroſtick Fees,
For ſingle, double, treble ones, like his;
The Alphabet and DOMMETT reſt in Peace.
